The Eyes have it

The mind “interprets” it. The eyes can’t see that, anymore than a t.v. antenna can display a program.

Where there’s a form, there’s a spirit manifesting it’s

It may be global warming setting sail for climate change, maybe you're an anti-Trumper, or a Trump supporter partying like there's no tomorrow, but everybody has a hypothetical clock to wind. It's not like the media ever hyper-hypes to make a living but, it can be a laughing matter.

It's the Spirit that keeps you moving, and the actual doing with it that stands out.

Ya can't visually see it, but the cause effects and great works keep happening. (Da Vinci, Einstein, Kennedy, Mahatma Ghandi, just a few names, never mind the nameless)

We all “get it”, or miss it, or marvel, or contest for the next Reality Spin Parrot.

But to some degree, we all get it.

The decline and folly of the American empire

Posted on May 22, 2019 by memyselfnie

Where exactly it started doesn't matter as much as the fact that it started. Jobs lost (call it environmental security), or freedoms lost, (for security), insane debt double-speaking us into financial security, cellphone zombies making technology secure, moral diversity making us perversely more secure, cameras everywhere make us seem secure everywhere, the coarsening of everything making our culture more secure. Reality politics making our government secure, the partisan back-biting to seem righteous and truthful every day. Certainly not last, and certainly not least, we seem to know that there is no God, never has been. Despite ZERO, you know, evidence that there is none (I think He's been hiding in the hearts of atheists everywhere.) there's nada, bupkis, proof of nothing, but... good thing we're not straining at gnats and swallowing camels, or we'd really be in trouble!

Nobody wants a war, apparently. But apparently, besides the president tearing up the Iran agreement, a national security advisor apparently deployed a carrier battle group, and some B-52's. And apparently we're evacuating non-essential people from the Iraq embassy.

Apparently, Iran has plans to get nasty.

And apparently the Venezuela thing has fizzled.

And apparently the N. Koreans don't like Mike.

And apparently, there's still a vacancy for the Secretary of Defense job. (How do you follow a man confirmed by the senate 98-1?)

And apparently, the current trade war with China is still a trade war.

But apparently, nobody wants a war.

So, peace then.

Rinsed, repeated, doctinated, dogmatized, supposedly for your protection by those who think they know, resulting in some serious mistakes throughout history, and rather than see what is, human parrots repeat a mantra:

The pellet in the pic finally worked it's way out of my leg after more than 35 years, I had been shot with a 38 loaded

I also had more than 1/2 dozen guns, hunted, and eventually got rid of all of em, mainly cause I came home one day to find my girlfriend's ten year old son with my double-barrel in his hands. I thought it was well hidden, not good enough. Fortunately, the shells for it were separate.

So, I am very qualified to have an opinion, and definitely do. Absolutely pro- gun, it is a right, and should be. It's not guns that kill people, bullets do. The Golfing Gods have spoken

Posted on April 9, 2018 by memyselfnie

Once upon a time, every year at Augusta's Mt. Olympus they contest, then anoint.

There's always names: Freddy, Phil, Rory, Bubba, Dustin, Ian, Vijay, Bernhard...
There's some magic involved. This year, when Tiger played and rolled in an eagle, there was some yelling ("He's baack!") When journeyman extraordinaire Charley Hoffman made a very appropo, almost karmic ace, there was some screaming. To his credit, there was some joyful jumping up and down too.
There was John Rahm not crying when his ball hit ground and rolled in water. He just kept playing. There was Jordan Spieth being his awesome self. Then there was The Man from Orange making his charge. None of which fazed the leader, Patrick Reed. He just sailed on thru. He didn't critterise, didn't dehumanize, didn't demonize, just let his sticks do the talking.
In other words, won with class.
But that was then, this is now. It's Monday morn, 10:18, do you know where your clubs are?

Could the best evidence be no evidence? Maybe it's a good thing that there's been no archeologist at a tomb found around Jerusalem, you know, the words, "here lie the remains of Jesus Christ" chiseled in stone, no backhoe rolling back a boulder, no Geraldo rushing in, saying "there appear to be skeletal remains of a man with holes in his feet and hands, a wound in his side – yes, this man has been crucified!"
Not that something like that wouldn't be good for T.V. – (and there would be T.V.), but just maybe the truth in this case would be that the Spirit outlasted the flesh yet again???

Naaa...

Posted on April 5, 2018 by memyselfnie

Which is probably why this is just now getting writ. My favorite Martian (not the T.V. character) is actually the Stranger in a Strange Land, a book by Robert Heinlein. Yup, a science fictional character by the name of Valentine Michael Smith, raised on Mars by Martians, was imagined by a writer, who also thought up an entire language, coined some great phrases (one of which is waiting is fullness) and created his own word (grok) which is actually in the dictionary. He also incorporated a new religion into the book, (The Church of All Worlds) and described the first waterbed, which was made some years later. Published in 1961, it was named by the Library of Congress as one of the Books that Shaped America, and if you haven't read it, you should.

1. Jesus Christ

Over two thousand years later, people say there's no proof He even existed. So just going with that, what do they really know?

NOTHING!

2. Julius Caesar

Lots of people came after him, but he was the Caesar.

3. Mahatma Gandhi

Would India be India if he hadn't lived? Maybe, but it would have been less.

Certainly not even close to a list, evidence of greatness isn't a list, or even a name, but like a lot of things, just cause ya can't see, taste, or feel it doesn't mean it's not there.

All three had great spirit in common, and proved it with their actions. Not to mention that all three were assassinated by those who thought they knew, but clearly didn't really.

Facts not in evidence

Posted on March 18, 2018 by memyselfnie

2017 was the year of the allegation, and there is evidence that will continue. Lots and lots of sexual allegation, no old police reports, no rape kits, not a single love child, no stained dress, no charge even filed. Not that things didn't happen, but stuff from decades ago, hard to prove without corroborating proof. No evidence of collusion, no proof that emails even existed, no proof they were deleted either, no proof of mental instability, no evidence proving that Assad gassed his own people, pics of dead civilians and esp babies not withstanding. No evidence of even one Iranian nuke, or even an Iranian nuke program, but there is still plenty of Assad and Iran mongering. There isn't even evidence of a bad deal, but the presses keep rolling on everything, and if there's ever any evidence of anything, the media will make damn sure you are righteously indignant, 24/7.

how did I get here?

Posted on March 16, 2018 by memyselfnie

First off, instead of Fergie, here's Jimi Hendrix at Woodstock. Everyone please shut up or go blind for the playing of the best anthem rendition ever. He blew every mind on the planet, probably the most patriotic thing any great guitarist junky has ever done, too.

What a long, strange trip it's been.

I have a theory tho, that the whole world started tripping one morning back in the 70's, when I had to tell someone from Jimmy Carter's white house that, "He's on another line and he'll call you right back."

You just don't do that in this country, but I did.

I walked around for weeks after that, mumbling, "We're all gonna die..." The voice on the other end of that line was clearly pissed, when he said,

“Does he know who this is?” but he was just as shocked as me when I replied, “Yes sir, and he said he’d call ya right back!”

I never did apologise for that, but I am sorry, cause ever since that day, the whole world’s been tripping.

The Reality of Control

It is the truth that control begins and ends with Self. No matter

As it should be, not control of society, government, (we) the people, the reality is : To thine own self be true.

It is the spirit in form, self-evident, we sometimes miss that, but the I's should not. After all, it only takes one.

The truth is, if we think we know, we definitely don't,
we just think we do, and so the hard way (experience) becomes certainty.

But don't just take my word for it, what do I know?

Never mind any kind of real, physical, solid type evidence or proof of guilt (like a mountain of spent brass), it's always this hysterical burn the witch or even hang the honkey (extremely racist) cause they sure do look guilty of something. The appearance, never mind the "judge not..." clause in the good book, will confer those black robes to anyone and judge, jury, sentencing is already done. God help any accused, who will demand a year-long trial with a team of doctors who will prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that said accused is just a stupid victim, and a team of lawyers, who will argue every fine point of law that will gain a mis-trial. Certainly everything will be paid for by God himself, it being a divine comedy of justice of course. If every day seems like the clowns have already been sent in, it's because they have.

Sometimes we're the pinball, sometimes we're the flipper. We go through life bouncing never even suspecting that, but the truth is we are effects, we don't want to think that way, everyone likes to believe we're masters of our own fate, but just follow the bouncing ball, not forward, backwards.

Constantly finding the glass half empty and accentuating the negative in everything and everybody, or finding the glass half full and accentuating the positive , whether you're positively negative or negatively positive, is a learned habit.

Just another effect of just another cause. One of many, but still, One of many, not that we all don't know better, because we're busy being vain and foolish, we don't do better. Being the ball, and being the flipper.

The Declaration of Independence

Posted on July 4, 2017 by memyselfnie

IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, —That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.—Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harrass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

It’s really shameful, either we know, or we don’t know, there is no “think we know”, but we fool ourselves. Usually we win that bet, tho sometimes we don’t, like so many other words the real definition is lost, fiction tries to becomes fact, the truth is not the truth, it’s sold (for want of a better word) and we buy it.

You certainly have your perceptions, and I have mine – and we either own what we think, or it owns us. Thinking we know, we constantly find out (mostly thru experience) that we do or don't. No need to accept that, your own experience will say it all, either with the spirit of agreeing, or disagreeing, you know or think you know, real proof or evidence is there, see it as you will.

We all want, or don't want, believe or don't believe, but what actually is depends alot on what actually is done. In all things, we can interpret, describe, even deceive ourselves with nice words, but as a long dead chinese guy once said, the way to do is to be, nice words don't mean crap when hell or high water actually comes, or the rubber actually meets the road, or any of the other stuff we say.

Posted on April 7, 2017 by memyselfnie

We are constantly mis-underherded by those who, for whatever reason, mis-understand, mis-interpret, or intentionally mis-lead us with stuff that just isn't true. Without proof, evidence or just even good intelligence based on real logic and true reason we constantly believe (assume) fake imitation of truth, rather than know (certainty) what is.

Desire, want of a certain outcome, or even just mis-placed trust in perception not necessarily what reality is leads to us gullible s falling for unknown unknowns.

We don't know that we don't know, but we think we do.

Shit happens, and it's to be expected, but when we start buying our own crap – that's extreme!

Not really a new thing, the belief that you are right will not only empower you with the assumption that the other side has to be wrong, the superpower of anything goes is awarded,- torture, kill, terrorize, whatever – it's justified. If you feel certain, never mind the facts – the appearance (and the play's the thing) will carry you and anything you do till it's actually done. Self will automatically feel sure till then, want will be absolute have to need, the human psych can delude till the cows come home. You can be crazy, maybe don't really know a damn thing and still maintain the appearance of being right, until it becomes crystal clear you're not. Then, it's back to reality, and being wrong about what's right.

Good Will

Posted on March 18, 2017 by memyselfnie

Actual intention from any kind of positive emotion – the non-judgemental, non-superficial kind of kindness not to be taken for weakness – is almost like a lost art for endangered persuasions. The very idea, the concept seems extinct, down to a one word corporation name, or the Hunting movie about math genius. Any kind of good will has to first pass a test; survive a witch hunt of distrust and any assumptions made, there's an ego to be assured and it just might be yours. Get past all the crap and there may in fact be some recognition left, a feeling. Congratulations!

Appearance of facts taken for granted means no need for a jury to even convene let alone retire. The verdict of guilty is carried out by the inference, and you are hereby sentenced to trial by a jury of your peers. After all, any idiot could find some fault in you, and we certainly have a few of them just waiting to do what's right. Some even have degrees in idiocy if totally lacking in common sense. The fact appears to be that one side is always playing against the other, and they always appear to be trying to get at the truth. So are you now, or have you ever been appearing? Enquiring minds wanna know. OK, don't answer that, on the advice of council you have the right even if you are guilty, and it appears you are.

POR EL AMOR DE MIGUELITO

Posted on February 26, 2017 by memyselfnie

In any true pissing contest, an official diaper change is essential for the righteous to lead, the media just reports that. After all, that's what an erection is really for, so that after years of pissing and moaning about “worst president ever” by those who think they know what bad is and are still actually here, we can move on to some real wet and shitty pity whining, “not my president”, by the righteous, for the righteous. Just to be fair, it is their turn. Not that the former el presidente was, he actually did a great job, considering those who opposed every single thing he actually did, just cause it was him doing. Not their perspective, everybody else’s. Just the facts, a lot of people woulda, coulda, shoulda starved (I blame NAFTA) years ago, but they didn’t. More?

Ok, when the self-described christian nation was screaming for innocent blood over an imaginary red line, and you know, demanded we attack a sovereign nation that didn’t actually do nothing to us, he removed a whole class of poor man’s WMD (chemical weapon) from the battle field without firing A shot. He could just as easily have ordered an attack, supposedly so everyone would “respect” us. Next day, everyone woulda had the patriotic guess we showed them attitude, and by the end of the week, it woulda been well, you spent another hundred million to kill this innocent, and that baby, with all the righteousness that could be mustered. Didn’t vote for the man, didn’t support him, at the time in fact I was calling that accidental gunboat diplomacy. Respect was earned tho. Truthfully, didn’t like some of the stuff the previous administration did, but I do remember the drama that was forecast by the loyal opposition, the world was definitely going to end in a nuclear fireball, just you wait. That didn’t actually happen, but it was re-forecast for January 22, 2017. So, go ahead and cry while you still can, even tho that time has come and gone, and the reality is still, he is your president. Oh wait, he’s not.

Is there an evil good, or a good evil, or even a good, or an evil?

Good question, but the answer may depend on your view. If there is a difference and you were slapped with the truth, would you know or care? Let me answer the head line, you are the difference. Perfectly logical to be where we are, champion of difference. Chic to be different, even more chic to be champion of the poor, migrant, gay, disabled, and the more colored the better. Any sameness? Yeah, we are all pretty sure we're the good guys, charged with right. Ever been pretty sure you were right, only to find out later you were wrong? Yeah, me too.

1. Population of individuals: 100 per cent
2. People born as babies: 100 per cent
3. Actual living that breathe: 100 per cent
4. Animated (Spirited): 100 per cent

Just a few things we all have in common, regardless of difference.

alternative perceptions

Posted on January 28, 2017 by memyselfnie

The facts on the ground being what they are, no two people perceive alike, so this here is to explain how you don't understand. It's not your fault you don't understand, you of course are an innocent victim of circumstances out of control, and it of course isn't you, cept you just don't understand. Don't feel bad, people who go to school to understand don't even understand that they just don't understand, so they just prove their understanding that they do. Good, ok, now that we all understand that we don't understand, we can all now get to seeing things our own way, without mis-understanding that we do, that way there is no mis-understanding that fact, no double-speak, or no further bout a doubt it, because it's a fact, it's definitely somebody's fault, and they just do not understand that, you do. Just so we have a crystal clear understanding. Think about it, because perfect understanding is perfectly understandable when you really understand.

Know your enemy

Posted on January 27, 2017 by memyselfnie

As a life-long fan of non-officially official "out of the box" box seat ticket holders', it is certainly very important if not crucial to "know your enemy". That you even think you have an enemy is usually half the battle, the other half knowing who/what/when. We then use "strategies", usually some type of brute force, to "win". In the box, we overcome by the use of armies, weapons, whatever form of violence we have available to dominate, and the known civilized world has been doing this thru-out known civilisation. Force of arms has always been the go to to solve problems; disagreement, perception of financial lack, you name it, the human race has slaughtered and justifies that using the faulty intelligence of fake reasoning, had to do it, self defense, no other choice, there's always fake reasoning, we find bullshit of mass deception and we're crazy enough to use it. Kick in some self-righteousness and "we have met the enemy, and he is us."

Mostly, can't even tell. Sometimes it can actually be better, different qualities, usually looks real, no matter what it is that's really fake, there's some way to tell. Maybe it's feel, taste, smell, certificate of authenticity, looks, use, analysis by electron microscope, if there's a will, there's a way, and if there's a buck in it, we'll buy it anyway.

In the land of the free, uncle Sammy is an equal opportunity employer, and it would be immoral and outrageous if one of those employee's were not given the same doubt of the benefit because of partisan politics. You know, like if democrats treated Trump like republicans treated Obama, only worsen cos they had a really good reason to... Common sense is constantly hi-jacked, it seems everyone is morally outraged for various things. As an individual (me here at myselfnie) I myself am morally outraged at the constant moral outrage, and have become deeply offended (that is faux offense) at the pretend negative emotion herding the world into ridiculousness, moo-ving forward. Doesn't really matter what side you take, long as you take one, and we justify that. That can be complete idiocy, long as there is passion and reason, so fall in line, get with the program, herd up, leave the real thinking to somebody else, and we do.

No proof, but no sign of brains either. No proof that Christ ever existed, or that most every word that was attributed to him is chock full of intelligence either.

No proof that God exists, or that He wrote the ten commandments in stone either. Still, there is wisdom there, too.

People say there's no proof the world is round.

Comprende? Prove it.

Peace (if you want it)

Posted on January 11, 2017 by memyselfnie

War is definitely a racket, proly more so than when Smedley Butler first declared that, proof of that seems clear. Just in the past few days, push-back from that racket is really obvious. Without any physical evidence what-so-ever, all 17 U.S.

intelligence (do we really have 17?) agencies claim the Russians hacked the election, in favor of Trump. The collective budgets certainly in the multi-billions, the price of faulty intelligence seems way more than just that. The air force declared that the way over budget, multi-billion, non-functioning f-35 cannot be replaced by the cheaper, existing, very effective f-18 program, can't be done, don't even consider it, with all the official hurrumph and pompous ridicule that she could muster, the very idea of it was pooh-poohed to the max. Meanwhile, a U.S. brigade was rapidly deployed to counter (supposedly) perceived Russian aggression. The Russians are definitely coming always worked before, and Putin is the new Hitler, so stand by to stand by, keep yer powder dry, many $$'s will be spent to protect you tho, not that there's any bullshit of mass deception.

Good thing the new and improved is here to save us from ourselves. We can rebuild D.C., make it better than it was, first we gotta drain the swamp, build a wall, lock her up, make America great again.

Trolls r us

Posted on November 30, 2016 by memyselfnie

The title does not refer to the recent revival of that little doll, or the imaginary critter that supposedly lives under a bridge and demands a toll, but the spirit in people that seems to take pleasure in causing pain in others. The discriminating troll tries to disguise that as constructive critterism, yet often gleefully (in a single word) will devastate a lifetime of effort, or the less discriminating will attempt simply to find fault in something. The result is the same, creating the illusion of lack; that something is wrong or missing, and the implication is that is somehow a contribution. Improvement by contempt is usually the only finding, the only real effort is creating a flaw whether there is one or not, even if it is just “ I don't like that.” No real discernment, just the expression of negative impression.

We don't necessarily know why we don't, but we know we don't, and a troll won't have any problem at all saying that.

Draining my personal swamp

Sounds good, right? Hopefully, that's not just parrotese for the shuffling of career bureaucrats from dem to repub. This time is different, cause no politico is gonna pee on ya then tell you it's raining, trust me. America loves jingles, so remember the Maine (ship), remember Pearl Harbor, remember 911. This isn't your kinder, gentler jingle, your hope and change jingle, or the "if you like your doctor you can keep your doctor" jingle, this is a jingle you can believe in. It's not like we ever fooled ourselves before, playing or getting played believing there's a magic wand somewhere gonna make America great again. This time is for real, really real real, it's not like anybody's blowing smoke. This time is absolutely full of it (potential), before wordplay and deeds go their own ways, and in the words of a famous Yale man; "Fool me once, shame on you, fool me twice... we'll never be fooled again!". Faulty perception leads to faulty assumptions, bringing us to faulty conclusions, and we'll see what we want to see in the 2,3,4, or 5 word jingle.

The most poorly understood phrase on every piece of money we have, does not say in religion, in government, in law, or anything else. The clear implication, there really is a God, and at least a majority of all of our ancestors trusted that that was a fact. Most everyone can parrot those four words, there are dozens of religions dedicated to worshipping that God, libraries are full of books delineating exactly how, what, when, and why, yet there are millions of people who think they know (for sure certain) that there is none, never has been. In thousands of years of civilization, we have no physical, material proof of (His/Her) existance, our best, sincere even, efforts have nothing really to prove beyond reasonable doubt, yes there certainly is, or no there certainly is not. Despite supposedly impartial, scientific sciencing, no demonstrable demonstration of God. All this time, even. Yet, here we are.

Always liked the idea that the beginning of wisdom be the definition of terms, and never having attended electoral college, I will be taking the blue pill this year.

There will of course be a trumped up quiz:

1. In a true democrazy, who really does the inmate-in-chief?

- a. The voting of us 300 million piple.
- b. The electrical college.
- c. The spray tan division of Frito Lay.

(There's only one true answer, but believe whatever you want by pretending this is America.)

2. All fake erections have two really real parties, a red one and a blue one.

- a. Mostly true.
- b. Kinda false.
- c. Really only one.

3. In the latest email in the water October sirprize scandal, what government alphabet is best supporting agency?

- a. cia
- b. tsa
- c. dia
- d. none of the above.

4. Which of the following statements are not like the others?

” I am not a crook”

“I did not have sex with that woman”

“Just cancel the erection”

- a. first
- b. second
- c. good idea

In the interest of brevity and an honest effort to stay saccharine there will only be one (1) extra credit question.

What political candidate deploys bullshit of mass deception?

(The correct answer should be in the form of a short essay, three words max)

What it is

Posted on October 22, 2016 by memyselfnie

We all have our own unique version of reality, which we all compile from our own distorted perceptions, often faulty, but our own resistance to see what really is has always been what becomes a stumbling block to us all. Call it just being stubborn, close-mindedness, or whatever you want, the result is our slanting what is real. Faulty perceptions have always been our downfall. Failure to view what is does not, nor has it ever, stopped the effect of what is. We have reaped the benefits and the pitfalls of this constantly because we refuse even the possibility that we should be riding the wave of what is, or get the hell out of the way of it. To paraphrase Ayn Rand: We can deny reality, we can't deny the effects of reality.

Reality is there, but the perspective that one takes in viewing that reality does not change it or affect it, but how we choose to see it is our reaction, right or wrong. Depending on your perspective, you may see a glass of water as half full or half empty, that does not affect the reality; some water is there, it could save one from dying of thirst or drown you, what one experiences depends a lot on how you see it, yet it is always there. Each individual should have their own way of seeing, not only do they have their very own individual viewing point, it does not change what is seen, just how what is seen.

Rolling holy in politics with righteousness

Posted on October 15, 2016 by memyselfnie

Whether democrat or republican, today's politics seem to require a silly form of opinion that there are no real principles in politics if your party is not the flavor of the month. Not an original opinion, it seems to be herd-based on the D or R your particular clan is sporting, people have to fit in and they might as well feel right about it, so join the party, any party.

Yes, what seems good to everyone is that winning is primo cause nothing spells loser more better than losing, lots of pretend courage, no conviction at all, and absolutely no criminal convictions, no charges filed, no investigations ongoing. Independents (those candidates without a large posse) are largely un-electable, but they win just by running principled campaigns and at least providing a choice in the election of no choice.

What should be obvious to the voting voters, what used to be the grand old party is now the grab our pussy, the elephant in the room is now part of one big-assed jack-ass wannabe, every one sure that we are right and holy.

Imagine!

Posted on September 29, 2016 by memyselfnie

The entire world is full of potential for good and apparently every single one of us has an ego which always thinks it knows. We are wise in our own eyes according to our ego, but how many actually are wise? It is an easy deception, everyone wants to believe that they are, but as the old saying goes, the proof is in the pudding.

As Einstein said, "The true sign of intelligence is not knowledge but imagination." My own definition of imagination is the fancy of the mind, and there is no real limit to that. We try hard to put that into a category – music, art, literature, science, but the sky is really the limit on that, then we'll monetize it, if it'll sell.

Potential is not actually an achievement in fact until it becomes something else, other than just fancy. Supposedly, a couple thousand years ago someone said, "knowledge not lived is sin", and since then an unimaginable volume of potential has come and gone un-real-ized. The whole point of my inspired crap, knowledge lived is real wisdom. Yet in our collective arrogant ignorance our own intelligence is sold (literally) to us as education in increments of years, the experience in real creation rarely included.

This is all included in my new book, a short tomb of 13,1510 pages, flying off the bookstore shelves for the always low price of $150 million.

That includes the full musical and lyrics of the previously unrecorded version of Lennon doing “Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer”.

Imagine that...

Remember the Spirit and keep it Holy

Posted on September 25, 2016 by memyselfnie

What is actually more important to you, what’s good, or what seems good? We all love appearances, that is reflected in our records. Perfect attendance, criminal records, credit ratings, various test scores, driving abilities... blah, blah, blah, but the actual understanding of what these things are supposed to be measuring should not be lost striving for score. The fact that this goes clear over our heads is everywhere that perceived winning is valued over how you actually play the game, and the “tests” we all take become an obstacle to what actually is the very real point of the tests in the first place, quality of human spirit.

People always believe what they want to believe

Posted on September 14, 2016 by memyselfnie

It doesn’t even matter what the facts are, people always fall for the BS they want to fall for. Wisdom is folly to the fool, and we are all fools, your ego may vary.

Us pawns think we are all chess grandmasters, real chess grandmasters know that we are all pawns. All life is a game, everyone is a player. EVERY ONE.

If you are alive, you are in the game of life. People are going to want to disagree with that just to disagree with that, they will have facts and figures proving they are not that, and they are certainly not a fool. Some very smart people think they know that there is a God, and some very smart people think they know that there is no God, and both will guarantee the other is a fool. Perspective is everything, and we all have our opinions that can justify any thing. If you are intentionally deceiving someone, it's for your own good. Usually though our opinion will be that we are moral and just, perfectly right even when we're definitely not.

The human race has managed to hijack just about everything, reasoning that it is just common sense to do so and supersize that please. The fool wants what the fool wants, therefore the fool needs. Not to put too fine a point on it, but we're all fools, and relative to each other. We have all fallen before bullshit of mass deception, even those who hate to admit they are gullible, too often because we want to believe, even when we are pretty sure it's bullshit.

Our illusions can be pretty, we are trained from birth to follow our dreams and conn ourselves into believing what we want to, but what actually is is rarely that. That is where our arrogance is born, we don't actually know, but we always think we do, falling for the bullshit every time because it's what we want to be, not that it's actually what is, and we deceive ourselves first.

Outta the mouth of morons

Posted on July 16, 2016 by memyselfnie

The whole world sees itself as outrageously righteous, and I am no exception. From the most foolish of us to the most wise, pretty much to a person we are all sure we’re right, even when facts prove we aren’t. It is a rarity to even consider that there could be another way and it could be the right one, especially when that other way ain't yours. Never, ever is the devil given his due, just doesn't happen now-a-days, but I am gonna try, even if fatal. At the memorial for the slain Dallas police officers, former president Dubya gave an excellent speech. Known more for his Bush-isms and unfound WMD's in Iraq, at least one line in said speech I thought was extremely remarkable and I quote:

“Too often, we judge other groups by their worst examples, while judging ourselves by our best intentions. And this has strained our bonds of understanding and common purpose.”

Easily one of the most intelligent things any of us morons have ever said.

I am, therefore I think.

Variety is the spice of life

Posted on July 14, 2016 by memyselfnie

Whether food, or religion, cars, phones, planes, collectables, what ever it is that floats your boat, the reality is there is a lot of choices. There is a variety in almost every thing one can think of, so much so that we have become so accustomed we take it for granted. It certainly isn't just a feature of mankind, nature is so varied in species be it trees, flowers, grasses, people, animals, rocks, etc., it would take a book. Even then I couldn't list everything, there's too many, yet all is in all.

Yup, everything fits in one universe, which is so damn big even the best telescope can't see any end. There may be an endless number of those, but the fact we can't even see an end to this one should make us all pretty small. Like atom size only smaller.

Full spectrum arrogance

Posted on July 14, 2016 by memyselfnie

As a country, we have become pretty damn conceited. Our reasoning isn't the best, our vanity doesn't rule the world, but we sure like to think our military does. Might doesn't make right and never has, but that doesn't stop us from blowing over a half trillion a year on “defense”. America certainly has alot of great points, but bragging is not one of em. What we spend just on “education” should make us the smartest people in the world, yet we destroy constantly.

If the USA really is the best country in the world, fake pride has been bringing it down to a shameful depth of faulty intelligence, and we don't even know it. It's not too late, the fix (according to me) is really simple, stop thinking we know it all and realise we don't. Using violence instead of real logic is a really good indication, the most intelligent men in history realized that their reasoning was more than sound. Those are the smart ones, the ones who really knew that reason was truth. Christ, Gandhi, Martin Luther King didn't just think they knew that non-violence was key, yet we keep trying to justify the use of force like we think we know. Fact is, if you think you know, that just proves you don't. Of course do not take my word for it, knowing is definitely not believing!

FINDING FAULT WITH FINDING FAULT

Posted on June 14, 2016 by memyselfnie

We all do, and nothing or no one is perfect, but finding the imperfections in the other person is always preferable (whether there is one or not) than finding fault with oneself. Critterism, constructive or not, (it's for your own good) is the pastime for elevating your opinion to expert, even if it is bullshit and you are full of it, leaving you blameless and too often turning the victim's spirit of creativity into one of resentment.

Whether there really is something wrong, or if it's just not the way you would do or say, and that's definitely not the way I would do it, it doesn't matter if the thin-skinned takes it the wrong way. The perspective of you slants the view you have of reality automatically, it's the world as only you know it, or think you do.

It is the rare person who can get past their own view of "You can't do that..." to offer real insight, encouragement, constructive invention to someone.

Who knows how many great innovations have been lost because someone (maybe with the best intentions) told someone else the limiting word "can't".

Personally, I will usually reply, "No, you can't, you just said so" or (my favorite) "too late, already did" but that's just me.

IMITATION YOU

Posted on June 12, 2016 by memyselfnie

No matter who you are, your perspective is your perspective. From the minute you are born, every thing you see, taste, smell, feel, think, or otherwise obtain, is unique – because there is no other you. You are an original individual, one of a kind. Out of about seven billion people, there's only one you, so really beware of imitations nowadays, especially being one. Rest assured, your originality would exist somewhere else if possible, and it would be made of plastic. All of the best consciousness' have been individuals: Christ was an individual, Mohammed, Buddha, Krishna, Confucious, Lao Tse, Gandhi ... you name who, they were a person, not a religion, or organisation, or nation, or corporation...they are all great examples of people who were themselves. A true masterpiece is not a copy of something great, it is great and it's original. Not that any of those named aren't great examples, they certainly are great examples of individuals, not one of a zillion copies. Humanity as a plural individual too often wants to duplicate, deify, copy, and mis-interpret form and the actual substance becomes lost to the imagined real. But the best, no matter what it may be, did not become so because it was mimicked, cloned, imitated, copied or samed...So be the ball, just be your own ball.
